

ODC Service

An Offshore Development Center (ODC) is a dedicated development center, located outside the client's premises, solely engaged in developing, testing and deploying software solutions and applications, most often in a country outside the client's country. It is a proven approach to offshore outsourcing, extends a company's development capacity by assigning low-cost, scalable, and highly skilled technical resources to support fluctuating development cycles.

Baosight can make tailored offshore development centers for specific clients. The ODC for Hitachi is one of the typical cases of ODC in Baosight. To find more about the case and our client's testimonial, please go to Case Studies.
